The Short Story of Africa and Famine

Pre-Colonial Period , of the African Continent, [yes Africans were able to feed themselves.] Famine would happen from time to time, but both the natural laws of mother earth kept the Human Population in Check, plus the odd hungry Lion or two 😊

Early Colonial Period; Relatively Modern and sometimes incompatible agri. systems were introduced, mainly on behalf of European Nations.

Current or Post-Colonial Independence Period; Struggle War and Famine [no descriptive hyper-link required here]. Destructive takeover of Commercial Euro-Farms, results in acceleration of conflict and quest for Bush Meat. Quest for Bush Meat = Accelerated contact with deadly pathogens.

So what is the answer? Clearly Africa has a communal/tribal past but with strong elements of independent and sustainable Agri-systems. In that past lays Africa's key to the Future?
